ABSTRACT

The directory of Oregon libraries provides an alphabetical listing of public, academic, and special libraries with addresses, telephone numbers, and names of head librarians. Included are public library statistics, a comparison of taxable property values, and communities served by Oregon libraries. Names of Oregon librarians, trustees of public libraries, members of the Oregon Library Association Executive Board, and the State Advisory Council on Libraries are also listed. (AP)

PREFACE

The greatest area of increase revealed in the 1975 FY public library statistics was in public support which gained 13% over last year in amount received by Oregon public libraries from city, county, and federal public fund sources. (See list of federal fund sources given later in Preface paragraph describing content of footnotes for "Other Funds." The gain occurred even though the only Library Services and Construction Act grants included were three that carried over from 1975: $7,525 to Jackson County Library for the Jackson-Josephine Cooperative Jail Library Services Program; $5,975 to Josephine County Library for the same program; and $26,000 used by the Salem Public Library for salaries and books but granted to Chemeketa Community Regional Library Service. The 13% compares with 8% gain in 1975.

Circulation statewide increased only 3% compared with last year's whopping 11%, and per capita circulation gained from 5.2 to 5.3. Twenty-eight of the 36 counties reported a circulation increase for 1976. Baker County surged ahead with a 17.9 circulation per capita during 1976. Grant County also increased and was second with 11.7, and Josephine was third with 10.3. The 1975 Population Estimates: Oregon Counties and Incorporated Cities, published by the Center for Population Research and Census, Portland State University, was used as the basis of these figures.

Total public library expenditures for 1976 increased 9%, down from the unusual 21% increase for 1975. Expenditure per capita gained slightly from $4.29 to $4.59. Baker County again achieved the highest expenditure per capita, $7.78, with Jackson and Multnomah at $7.33 and $6.54 respectively.

Oregon's population without public library service remained at 19%, or 446,896 people.

Footnoted in "Other Funds" columns of the statistics are sources of federal funds which include Library Services and Construction Act, Title I, grants received by 3, Revenue Sharing Act funds received by 21, Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds received by 8, American Revolutionary Bicentennial Commission funds received by 2, College Work Study Program funds received by 1, VISTA program funds received by 1, Senior Community Service Employment Project funds received by 1, and Work Incentive Program funds received by 2 public libraries.

Bookmobile and station circulation are included in the figure for "Extension Service" under counties that have such services.

The 1976 Directory includes statistics received from all of the 185 current public libraries, including branches.

Oregon librarians, trustees, and public officials have been especially cooperative and helpful in providing the data to the State Library, and publication is the result of this collective effort.
